

Introduction to AI & AI Ethics (COVID-19 Regulations, Guidelines, & Measures)

General COVID-19 Guidelines

Kindly ensure the following before each seminar:¹

- You do not exhibit any of the symptoms of COVID-19, even in a mild form: dry cough, shortness of breath, breathing difficulties, and other respiratory symptoms, a sore throat, and other flu-like symptoms;²
- You do not have an association with any of the clusters in Singapore and any of the positive cases in Singapore;
- You have not been placed under any leave of absence (LOA) or stay-home notice (SHN);
- You have taken your temperature and checked in via SafeEntry before entering the various NTU facilities. Kindly ensure that you exercise social responsibility for the duration of each seminar:
- Wear a face mask at all times during lessons;
- Sit in groups of up to 5 individuals and ensure that you sit in the same group for every lesson;
- Each group of 5 ought to maintain at least a metre of distance from all other groups;
- Heed the social distancing measures and leave at least one empty seat between you and the next person;
- Wash hands with soap at regular intervals or whenever necessary (e.g. after heading to the washroom);
- Use tissue or be discrete when coughing or sneezing;
- Excuse yourself once you start feeling unwell;
- In addition, do note the following:
 - You may apply for a medical exemption to learn online (subject to approval);
 - You will be eligible for a Medical Certificate (MC) if a member of your household comes down with an acute respiratory illness (ARI).

Guidelines for Classroom Teaching & Learning

Here are some guidelines for classroom teaching and learning that will be administered at NTU:

- At the beginning of each lesson, students attending the lectures in person will scan in their attendance using the QR code (for contact tracing purposes);
- If table tops are used, students are expected to wipe them down before and after every lesson.

Let us strive to make our learning environment a safe and COVID-19-free one! 😊

¹ These guidelines apply to students who will be attending the lessons in person. As the lessons will be conducted under a hybrid model, some students may be attending the lessons via Zoom. In the latter instance, these guidelines may be glossed over.
